

There's more to success than just landing a job ...

STATIM-YAGA
•• (START-WORK) ••
Indigenous Employment & Training in Construction

BUSY At Work is excited to partner with Australia's largest privately owned builder, Hutchies (Hutchinson Builders) to deliver the Statim-Yaga (Start Work) program.

The program focuses on supporting Indigenous workers in the construction industry.

BUSY will work with Hutchies to deliver mentoring support and career planning to eligible Indigenous apprentices, trainees and their employers within the construction industry.

Statistics have shown that, on average, apprentices who participate in a mentoring program are up to 15% more likely to complete their apprenticeship than those who do not have a mentor.

Support available under the Statim-Yaga program will include:

- A combination of face to face, phone or online engagement with apprentice and employer
- Tailored support plans including mentoring to address the needs of the individual
- Creating work plans to help clients implement good work strategies
- Provision of information and advice including the best way to approach workplace issues

Who can get involved:

Statim-Yaga (Start Work) program is open to:

- Indigenous Australians looking for a career in the construction industry
- Indigenous Construction industry employers wanting to hire an Indigenous apprentice

Visit busyatwork.com.au/statim-yaga or contact Robyn Donnelly on 0417 875 005

Eligibility Criteria Applies

Statim-Yaga is an initiative by Hutchinson Builders in partnership with the Australian Federal Government.